PENNSYLVANIA Republicans have every reason to be proud of the greeting sent to the Nation (we spell it with a big N now) from the Keystone State. We of McKean county do not take to ourselves very much credit for this almost unprecedented victory, but we are just as happy over it as if we lived in Philadelphia or Allegheny counties.

THE victory in New York is better than at first reported. The Republicans have not only elected their Governor, but have probably elected the entire State ticket except State Engineer. The official canvass is now in progress and until it is concluded the Lieutenant Governor remains in doubt. All the probabilities, however, point to the election of the Republican candidate.

The Barrs must be considered as substantially disposed of as political factors. It will be several years before Daniel O. will issue another circular to his church people, begging support for a State office.—Philadelphia Press.

A WASHINGTON dispatch says, at a meeting of the National Republican Committee, December 17th, the place for holding the Republican National Convention will probably be selected. Probably Chicago will be chosen, although New York, Philadelphia and Saratoga want it.

COL. ROBERT A. CRAWFORD, whose 251 slaves were set free when Sherman marched through Georgia, is out for Grant for President and ex-Chief Justice Lochrane, of Georgia, for Vice President. He favors such a Democratic ticket because he believes that the wounds which discord has opened through the land would be healed if the two men should be elected.

THE Greenback vote of Pennsylvania will not exceed 10,000 this year. Last year it was 81,758 for Governor and 99,316 for Supreme Judge. That looks very much like the last gasp before going out of business. More than half the vote now classed as Greenback is really the Labor vote of Lackawanna and Luzerne, and the organization maintains its existence without any regard to the currency issue. It is safe to say that the Greenback element as a political factor is entirely effaced from our contests in Pennsylvania.

THE State ticket to be elected in Pennsylvania next year will be composed of two candidates — Judge of the Supreme Court, and Auditor General. The necessity for choosing a Judge is caused by the death of Judge Woodward, in whose place, Hon. Henry Green, of Northampton county, is now serving by Gov. Hoyt's appointment. The term of Auditor General Schell, who was elected in 1877, will expire. But besides the two State officers, there will be a full list of the members of the House of Representatives, 201 in all, and half the Senate, numbering 25 members. All this in addition to the President, a full delegation in Congress, and large county tickets, will make a lively contest in 1880.

GENERAL GRANT being requested the other day to talk to a correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, about Galena, said: "I shall not be able to do much more than call Galena my home after a while. It is a good place to live now, as on my income I can live there much cheaper than in a large city, and live better than most of my neighbors then. My income is not large enough for me to live as I would like; and I will have to find something to do after a while. I have two farms near St. Louis, and some real estate in Chicago, which if I could sell I would feel better off. My land in Chicago is thirty-one acres, just outside the western limits of the city. Eleven years ago I was offered $1,500 an acre for it, and now, after paying taxes on it all that time, I couldn't get $250 an acre for it. But I did better in some other investments, or I could never have traveled abroad as long as I have. I had stock in the Adams Express Company, which went up; and I bought right after the fire in Virginia City, Nev., Union and C. and C. stock, when it had gone down from $700 a share to $130, and made $50,000 or $60,000 there."

Gov. Hoyt's Thanksgiving Proclamation

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.

The following proclamation was issued from the State Department to-day:

In devout recognition of the God of States, who has ordered peace, health, and abundant prosperity to the people, I, Henry M. Hoyt, Governor of Pennsylvania, do appoint Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of November next, in pursuance of the recommendation of the President of the United States, as a day upon which the good people of this Commonwealth, laying aside all secular occupations, may meet together in reverent thanksgiving for mercies received and prayer for a continuance of divine favor.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State, at Harrisburg, this 8th day of November, A. D. 1879, and of the Commonwealth the one hundred and fourth.

M. S. QUAY,

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Only Thorns for Chandler.

Of all the newspapers in the country, the Pittsburgh Post alone has nothing but thorns to scatter over the grave of Senator Chandler. The journal whose partisan bitterness is not dissipated by death, can inspire nothing but disgust.—North American.

DID THE DECEASED LEAVE ANYTHING?

We would not invade the sanctity of an overwhelming sorrow. Heaven forbid that we should carelessly, or out of mere curiosity, intrude upon this great grief of the Democratic party, or that we should venture on this solemn occasion upon thoughtless conundrum or frivolous inquiry. Over the abundant manifestations of woe which we see among the leaders of that great but unfortunate party we would fain draw the veil of a decent and decorous regard. It is their funeral. Theirs as exclusively and specially as though it were protected by copyright and covered all over with letters-patent. It is no business of ours, nor do we have any desire to stand off and coldly criticise the character of the procession, the behavior of the undertaker, or the deportment of the mourners. The corpse is theirs—it is for us to sit silent as the heavy-heeled sexton waves his screw-driver and calls upon the friends and relatives to "pass up the north aisle and down the south aisle, and take their last view of the remains;" for us only reverently to uncover as the hearse goes by. And if we can remember little or no good of the departed, we may at least say that there has seldom been a funeral of so absolute a character or one which upon the whole gave such general satisfaction.

Nor have we any desire to hurry up the settlement of the estate. Ample time should be allowed to dull the edge of affliction and accustom the bereaved to their new condition. But we do venture just at this time—not because we are at all impatient, but because the general public seems anxious for early information on the subject—to inquire whether the party which has just gone out feet foremost has left any effects; anything whatever to be administered upon; anything to warrant the heirs in keeping up the sign or continuing the business at the old stand. There have been times when the deceased claimed to have on hand a large and well-selected assortment of political principles. Most of them, however, were exclusively for Southern consumption, and the withdrawal of that trade during the war left the party pretty nearly bankrupt. For the past twenty years it has been eking out a precarious subsistence by speculative ventures of one kind and another, from some of which it enjoyed a brief accession of good fortune sufficient to turn its head and set it on the wildest schemes and most hazardous enterprises; but from none of them did it derive any permanent profit. It speculated very largely on the reverses of the war, and once or twice seemed the gainer by it, but Appomattox caught the party "long" of calamities and no market for them, and it went all to pieces. Since the war it has snapped up anything and everything that was flung upon the market that offered the slightest chance to trick the public and make a sharp turn. It speculated recklessly upon Republican disaffection with the Grant administration; upon military rule at the South; upon carpet-baggers; upon corruption in office; upon the hardship of paying the National debt; upon the difficulties in the way of resumption; upon hard times, inflation, greenbackism, grangerism, Tildenism; and, finally, on the condonation of fraud.

None of these have been profitable ventures, though the party in the coffin worked them all with great assiduity, and at times amassing capital at a rate which would place it above want for a term of years. But these accounts were pretty much all closed out at a loss some time before the recent catastrophe, and in the late elections the chief business was to rescue as much as possible from the disastrous speculations on Anti-Resumption in Ohio and Fraud in New York. In this effort everything went by the board. To the eye of the impartial observer, there seemed to be nothing left—no estate to be settled, no assets to divide, no inheritance for the heirs, no pretext for continuing business, no excuse for keeping up the sign. And yet there may be something in the garret, amongst the old lumber, something that has been stowed away there ever since the times of Jefferson, Jackson and Calhoun, that can be made to serve the uses of capital temporarily, or until hard times and poor crops bring around another chance to speculate on the country's distress. If there is any such thing among the rubbish let the administrators bring it out at once, or else put up the shutters and take down the sign.—N. Y. Tribune.

Senator Chandler's Successor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The Post's Washington special says it is believed there is little doubt of ex-Governor Bagley's appointment to succeed Chandler, as he appears to be the choice of the Legislature, and the Governor will probably consult their reference. Bagley probably pays the largest revenue tax to the Government of any citizen in the country, on account of his great tobacco manufacturing business. Nevertheless, he declined to unite with other firms in the trade in their appeal to Congress last winter to reduce the tobacco tax. It is a little singular that Bagley does not use tobacco in any form.

A Merry Heart.

Solomon says, "A merry heart maketh a glad countenance," but the heart is not apt to be merry if one is suffering from dyspepsia, biliousness, indigestion or liver complaint. For the certain cure of these distressing maladies, we have never yet discovered a medicine equal to Parmelee's Dyspepsia Compound. Give it a trial, and if not entirely satisfactory return us the empty bottle and we will refund your money. Sample bottles in cents; large size $1. Sold by A. B. Armstrong, druggist.

A Standard Agent.

From the Pittsburgh Telegraph.

During the construction of the Tide Water Pipe Line the Standard Oil Company resorted to every means to prevent the company from getting a perfect title to the right of way. When that failed the pipe itself was tampered with in hopes of delaying the completion of the line. Nothing was effected, and as soon as the pipe line was open and in operation the Solar Refinery, at Williamsport, was set running at its full capacity. That is an "outside" refinery, and was, of course, at once made the victim of the practices of the Standard. Through influence an agent of the Standard was appointed oil inspector at Williamsport. All through the summer this inspector, W. M. Harrison by name, has been annoying the Solar Refinery by the methods so familiar to other competing refiners. He has neglected to inspect oil which was ready for market, and has thus delayed the filling of orders, and it has even been charged that he has falsely branded the products of the refinery, with the purpose of injuring its business among consumers. In addition to these proceedings he has charged exorbitant and illegal fees for the duties he has failed to discharge, and altogether conducted himself in such a way as to become a wrecking of the Standard. Last Saturday this inspector was brought before the county court on a motion filed for his removal. After hearing the allegations the Court suspended Harrison, appointed an inspector to fill his place till the case is heard, and granted a rule to show cause why he should not be permanently removed. The rule is returnable the 15th and the issue will be awaited with much interest.

Taking the Census.

This State is entitled to ten Supervisors, and hence it will be divided into ten districts. It is understood that the districts will be comprised as follows:

Philadelphia is divided into two districts, 1st and 2d.

The 3d district is composed of the following counties: Delaware, Chester, Lehigh, Montgomery, Berks, Bucks, Monroe, Northampton and Pike.

Fourth District—Schuylkill, Carbon, Luzerne, Lackawanna, Columbia, Mountour, Northumberland.

Fifth District—Lancaster, York, Adams, Lebanon, Dauphin, Cumberland, Perry, Juniata Mifflin, Snyder, Union.

Sixth District—Wayne, Susquehanna, Wyoming, Bradford, Sullivan, Lycoming, Tioga, Potter, Clinton, Cameron.

Seventh District—Cambria, Huntingdon, Blair, Franklin, Fulton, Bedford, Somerset, Fayette, Westmoreland.

Eighth District—Allegheny.

Ninth District—Indiana, Armstrong, Butler, Venango, Clarion, Jefferson, Forest, Elk, McKean, Centre, Clearfield.

Tenth District—Warren, Erie, Crawford, Mercer, Lawrence, Beaver, Washington, Greene.

The supervisors are appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The supervisor selects the enumerators. Thirty days is the longest time allowed any enumerator to do the work assigned; hence the sub-districts in each county must be very small.

Chairman Hooten's Address.

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE, PHILADELPHIA, November 6, 1879.—To the Republicans of Pennsylvania: The State Committee tenders to every Republican in the State, and to all others who aided in securing the victory of November 4, thanks and congratulations. You have given the greatest majority ever cast in Pennsylvania for a Republican candidate, save that given to General Grant in 1872, and you have done this in a campaign the seeming apathy of which, at first, alarmed the timid and the doubtful. You have given Pennsylvania a proud place in the phalanx of States demanding that our revived prosperity shall not be destroyed; that our currency shall not be debased, that the public credit shall not be tarnished and that the rights and privileges of the citizen shall not be crushed out. All this you have done by your stern protest against continuing in power the Democratic party, which assails prosperity by collusion with foreign capital to break down American labor and home industries; that seeks to destroy a sound financial policy and substitute a crazy theory of paper currency; that prostrates public credit through the State, corporate and municipal repudiation of our national debt, and that suppresses by violence in the Southern States those rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness without security for which governments are contemptible and existence is a curse. By your voice these wrongs and dangers to the nation have been averted and the rights of all our citizens will be redeemed.

F. C. HOOTEN, Chairman.

Blaine Going in for 1880.

J. R. Young's Washington Letter to the Star.

From what I heard and saw while among Blaine's friends in New York—and he has scores of them there—I am sure that they are about to begin to push his canvass for the Republican Presidential nomination with the greatest vigor. They say he is the only man who can carry the convention and prevent Grant's name from being brought forward. They believe Blaine to be as popular now as he was in '76, and think that all it needs to make him the candidate is hard and systematic work.

Letter from J. J. Roberts.

NEWTON, Kansas, Nov. 8, 1879.

To the Editor of the Miner.

Thinking a few words might be of interest to some of your readers I will give a condensed account of my travels for a few weeks in Kansas.

I left Ceres October 13th and started to look up southern Kansas, and in due time reached Parsons, the principal town of Labette county, in the southeastern part of the State, a city of some 4500 inhabitants, substantially built with good stores, hotels, &c., surrounded by as nice a country as a person need to wish for. Here during the day I noticed hundreds of farmers coming with wagon loads of wheat and corn, and then visiting the stores for family supplies, clothing, etc., the principal streets being crowded; and I was informed by a reliable business man that sometimes on Saturday a marshal is obliged to go through the streets and clear them for blocks so teams could pass through. This place is surrounded by a rich farming country, soil deep and price of land high. Next I visited Chanute, Neosho county, some twenty-eight miles north of Parsons, at the junction of the M. K. & T. and Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern road.—This is not so old or large a place as Parsons but full of enterprise. There are several hotels, any quantity of restaurants, stores, etc., all doing a good business. Here too there are two elevators, both buying and shipping grain; also quite a point for shipping "Porkers," (not draw). The place has a population of some 1500. From here I visited Independence, the county seat of Montgomery county. This also is a fine town (city) of some 3500 inhabitants, good substantial hotels, stores, and business places of all kinds and has been the terminus of the K. C. L. & S. R. R. until recently, which of itself would build up the place. From this place I went west on same road, passing through Elk City to Elk Falls in Elk county, a small place but has been building some eight years. Being near the Flint Hills and the farming country not being so good as in other places it is of but little importance. After staying over night at a private house (it being the best hotel in the place) I took the stage in the morning for Winfield, county seat of Cowley county, passing by and over the Flint Hills, and near the line of the R. R. grading. The first twenty miles of this ride was rough and rocky and then a nice country. Reached Winfield early in the evening, tired after a ride of 55 miles in the cold, cutting wind. During this ride I thought I did not like Kansas. Winfield is here called by many the Queen City of the Southern Tier. Population 3500. It is one of the most substantial towns of the State, and has more wealthy men than any other of its size or twice as large. From the very first the buildings have been good. Since becoming a R. R. city a short time ago the development has been rapid and trade largely augmented. Some fifteen miles south lies Arkansas City. This also is a nice place of some 1500 inhabitants. It will be the terminus of the road for the present and probably until the Indian Territory is opened up for settlement from Winfield to Wellington, the county seat of Sumner county. Here I find a city of 2500 where two years ago there was but 500. The sidewalks and streets are full from morning till night with a busy, surging mass.—This place has become the leading point for all supplies for the military posts and Indians in the Territory. A good class of business houses are built and building. They will soon have another railroad, as the K. C. L. & S. is reaching out its iron hand from Independence to clasp the city in its friendly embrace.

Labette, Cowley and Sumner counties are the finest farming portions of the State. Some say eight years ago it was thought this part of the State was poor land. Now the virgin soil has been turned over by the hundred thousand acres, and everything grown in profusion. It seems to be a settled fact that the first settlers have to sell out, by reason of getting in debt, and go farther away. So farms partially improved can be had for from eight to twenty-five dollars per acre.

From Wellington I went south west to Caldwell, some two and one-half miles of Indian Territory and about twenty-five miles by stage from Wellington—a place of about 600 inhabitants. Here they are expecting the railroad to come from Wellington and terminate, as in Arkansas City, and should this be the case it will make as lively a town as there is in the South West. But you can't tell what railroads will do. From here I returned to Wellington, then to Belle Plains, Mulvane Junction, and Wichita. The latter place has been the monarch town for some eight years, but now the trade is cut off by the railroad extension; and her domains no longer reach out of the United States to the aboriginal territory. She is still the ruling genius of her section and her trade is enormous. Between this and Newton I saw nothing of interest except a good farming country. Thinking I have already taken up more space than you will thank me for, I will close.

Respectfully,

JNO. J. ROBERTS.

NOTES EQUALLY GOOD AT ALL TIMES.

Up and down, in sickening uncertainty, for seventeen years we have been tossed on the waves of unredeemed paper money At last redemption chains the currency to gold, and our feet touch the solid land Now, for the first time we can know over night what the greenback will be worth at breakfast time Men say gold also changes in value. So the solid rock, to which a ship is moored after a voyage, is really moving—round the sun But it moves only as the world moves For all practical purposes it is still A currency that is moored to gold can change only with the money of the whole civilized world Hence it disturbs foreign commerce and consequently domestic industry and trade, less than any other form of money that has yet been tried

From at its worst, our currency of greenbacks and National bank notes was in some respects the best this country had known When it rose or fell in value, the whole country shared the gain or loss Uniform money, which no longer made the West pay tribute to the East, was of incalculable benefit If the money in use during the war had not been of equal value in all parts of the country it is not at all sure that Grant would have reached the Appomattox, or Sherman the sea. Men learned to see behind each note, not some one of a swarm of banks of all kinds and grades, but one great nation Each note was as secure as any other whatever value any had, all had Yet this simple currency, though vastly better than that which it drove out of use, was bad money, because it had no fixed value. It was ever changing, because the note was a promise which was not redeemed The prospect of its being paid varied with every battle with good crops or a great fire; with increase or decrease in the amount issued, with the victory or defeat of a party.

This money did not tax one section steadily for the benefit of another. But it taxed everybody by turns, for the benefit of nobody The brigands of Mexico do not take as much from the property owners of that country, in the aggregate, as is taken in needless taxes or pilfered by corrupt officials in many civilized lands, but they kill all trade and industry. So changeable money infested all the highways of trade, making every step uncertain and costly. At first the dealers, as a class, made great gains they bought with dear money at low prices, and sold for cheaper money at higher prices. But their turn to lose came when money went up and prices went down Soon they learned to charge higher rates of profit on every sale to insure against risk of a change in the value of money Having paid $5 a barrel for flour, in money worth 55 cents on the dollar, the dealer knew that he might be obliged to sell for money worth only 40 cents, and hence charged $7 per barrel This made a wider gap between the price paid to the producer and the price paid by the consumer. So all middlemen dealers, transporters and speculators defended themselves against a possible fall in the value of money by a heavy tax upon consumers, and this is the secret of the extravagant charges retail prices, in times of variable money.

But this wider gap between producer and consumer swelled the cost of living. That forced workmen to seek higher wages That raised the cost of producing things, and that, in turn, compelled the produced to ask higher prices; and that, in turn, drove the traders to charge still larger profits So the cost of things was pushed up step by step First our foreign trade was disordered; this became the best of all countries in which to sell, and the worst in which to buy, and goods from abroad were emptied upon this market, with goods of our own which foreigners had been wont to buy. Next, many found that they could no longer consume at high prices as much as before Workmen found wages had gone up less than the cost of living, and they had less to spend All the wheels were clogged Everybody was in trouble though few could see why. Trade slackened and grew stagnant. Active traders were left with great stocks of high priced goods prices tumbled, and traders by the thousand were ruined. Producers stopped their mills, or mortgaged their farms, and workmen by the thousand sought work in vain.

Every thrifty man who saved anything began to lose, when money fell in value. If he had loaned 1,000 dear dollars, the debtor paid 1 000 cheap dollars. If his savings were in bank, each dollar came to mean less value He who had saved $100 in 1860 found in 1864 that $61 of it had vanished He who had money in a stocking found that two-thirds of its buying power had gone There was small inducement to save such money. It seemed to come more easily every day but melted away in the hands of one who tried to save it Habits of thrift faded away That meant mischief, not merely to millions of men and women whose habits thus formed have cost them years of misery, but to all good workers and honest dealers. Industry is kept alive by capital—that is, by that which has been saved in the past When saving stops, the stream of capital runs dry As a thousands little rills come together to form a river deep enough to float a nation's commerce, the small savings of the millions are brought together to sustain great enterprises, to float an active trade, and to keep mills and mines, furnaces and farms at work But the little rills dried up in the years when hard money discouraged thrift Those who had money, too, became afraid to lend it, for nobody knew what sort of money might be paid Its value was fixed by Congress, and not by redemption, and every gain of a cheap money party made lenders less willing to lend Thus on all sides industry was deprived of support. On the the other hand, much money was drawn into the wild speculation, which uncertain money breeds The chances to make great sums by rapid changes in the value of money and in prices turned trade into gambling Money went thither. Production fainted, and speculation thrived.

All these things we have seen For years we saw dealers trying, by heavy charges which finally over-loaded trade, to guard themselves against the risks which comes with variable money. We saw the producer get low prices for what he sold, and pay high prices for what he bought. We saw savings shrink, while men of means locked up their funds in fear. For years we saw speculators busy, while mills were still and furnaces dark. The sharp lash of suffering should have taught us that the land does not thrive when its money changes in value day by day. At last redemption has chained our currency to the world's money. With lower prices comes a vast foreign trade. Steady money brings lower charges by retail dealers, transporters and middlemen. The workman gets low wages, but the cost of living is low, and few are out of work. Savings again supply capital, and men and women are getting back to the sober and frugal ways of our ancient prosperity. With firm land under their feet, men of means take new courage, and unlock their treasurers for the support of labor. We have learned in a hard school, let us not forget that a note that is not redeemable at the will of the holder cannot have a steady value, and that notes of unsteady value are bad money, which brings terrible loss to the nation that uses it.

Weary of the World.

Among the passengers on the train which left Bradford for Olean on the O. B. & W. narrow gauge railroad last Friday at 3 o'clock was a young lady of very respectable appearance and neatly dressed. She was about 24 years of age. During the journey over the hills her manner attracted the attention of some of her fellow passengers. She wore an abstracted air, and acted not a little like a person under the influence of liquor The attention of Conductor Kingen was called to the fact and he kept watch of her movements. She appeared exceedingly ill at ease and walked restlessly about the smoking car. After the train had passed over the Allegheny river bridge at this place she walked out onto the platform, looking cautiously around to see if she was watched. The attention of the brakeman being called to her singular conduct he followed her out, but before he could reach her she precipitated herself with great force from the train, which was going at the rate of twenty miles an hour. So determined was her leap that she sprang eight or ten feet clear of the cars. She fell heavily and with such impetus that she rolled over four or five times.

The train was stopped as speedily as possible and backed up to where the unfortunate woman was lying. Conductor Kingen, Captain Swett and others picked her up and placed her on the train. Her left shoulder was badly smashed and she probably sustained severe internal injuries. She was partly conscious, and managed to say that she was a sister to the wife of Dan Meek, a torpedo man and Carpenter, well known in town, to whose house she was taken.—Olean Times

ROLL OF HONOR.

Smethport High School, for weeks ending Oct. 31, 1879.

The plan of this Roll is as follows:

At the beginning of each week the names of all the students of the High School are placed on this roll. If the conduct, the refinement, the self respect, and general deportment of the student have been such as is implied in the word "HONOR," that student is allowed a credit of one, for each such day, during the week, which, if perfect every day, will make the standing at the end of the week five, which is the highest number any one can obtain on this roll. On the other hand, for every misdemeanor, neglect of duty, or violation of self respect, one is deducted, and for five such failures the the name is dropped from this roll for the week. At the end of the term a final roll will appear, containing the names of those only who obtained the highest honors during the entire term.

Another "Strong" Letter.

SMETHPORT, Nov. 4, 1879.

To the Editor of the Miner.

The following letter explains itself, having been written by one of my old neighbors, near Portville, and not intended for publication; so I withhold the name:

PORTVILLE, Oct. 18, 1879.

MY DEAR MRS. STRONG:—A few days ago a paper came to me from the office and as I glanced at the superscription your image came up before me so plain that my first impulse was to sit down and cry, but being anxious to see the paper, I concluded to restrain my tears a few moments, and proceeded to remove the wrapper and open, and of course my eye first caught sight of the little scrap clipped from another paper. It was the article signed "James" from the MINER. The interest I took in it and the sentiments it contained checked my tender emotions somewhat, until I discovered the reply of J G Strong, then my heart again swelled with emotions of gratitude for the very generous, outspoken defense of our people, and the sentiments of warm christian charity which it breathed. Many thanks to J. G not only from me and mine, but from all of our people. I have showed it to several and all are pleased with the reply Mr. Hornblower heard of it and came in to see it, said he thought John had done the fair thing by us, and was much pleased The paper has gone to Genesee and you will probably hear more about it * *

The balance of the letter was about other subjects. The readers will discover a slight contrast in the above, and the latter from the so-called "Sabbatarian"

Yours respectfully,
J. G STRONG.

HUNTING A TIGER.

A TIGER FROM FOREPAUGH'S MENAGERIE DISCOVERED AT LARGE IN A FIELD, AND, AFTER REPEATED EXHIBITIONS AND ALARMS IS SHOT AND KILLED

A most exciting affair occurred up in Torresdale, on the New York branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, 14 miles from Philadelphia, early Saturday morning, October 25th. About five o'clock, and while it was yet very dark, Andrew Hoffmeyer, a stone mason, who lives about fifty rods from the Red Line Hotel, near the railroad, was awakened from his sleep by hearing moans proceeding from some point outside not far from the house. He listened for some moments, trying to make out what it meant. First there would be a low groan, which would gradually rise higher and higher, until it would clearly resemble a human voice, then sink again and die away in a long wail. This kept up for some time, Hoffmeyer listening meantime with mind more perplexed than ever. At length he roused his wife and both listened. The sounds would break out at intervals and continue a short time, then cease as before. It resembled a human voice more than any other sound imaginable, and the listeners finally came to the conclusion that it was some one in pain. Presently, when the sounds were renewed, Hoffmeyer sprang out of bed, declaring that he knew it was some one in distress, and that he could not lie there and listen to the sound any longer. Dressing himself hastily he went down stairs, opened the door and passed out in the darkness in the direction whence the noise proceeded It came from the field of a neighbor, named Wheelan, adjoining Hoffmeyer's yard. Walking down across this field he presently, through the darkness, discerned what seemed to be the body of an animal lying close up against a fence. Hoffmeyer thought it was a cow suffering from some hurts, and full of good intentions advanced closer, until he had got within a few steps of the incumbent form of an animal, when he became conscious of two fiery eyes glaring at him out of the darkness with an expression that belonged to no branch of the cow species under the sun. To say that Hoffmeyer got out of the way quickly is to do injustice to the remarkable physical activity which he brought to bear on the matter at that critical moment. There was a tree not far distant, and in his progress toward that desirable point the grass never felt the touch of his feet. Having reached the tree, and seeing he was not followed, he deliberated a moment, and then ran toward a shop where lights were glimmering at that early hour. It was States' butcher shop. Bursting into the place, where Mr. States and two or three hired men were at work, he informed them breathlessly of what had happened. At first they were disposed to discredit his story. Hoffmeyer stuck to it that some kind of a wild animal was down in the field and that he had almost stepped upon it. At length the men threw down their work, and declaring they would settle the matter in short order, the party sallied out.

Let's go and capture him, said States, laughing at what he conceived to be a good joke on Hoffmeyer.

Down in the field they went, States heading the party. Soon they heard the groans and saw the dark body of the animal which States said was a cow and increased his pace. When he got near the fence Hoffmeyer, who was cautiously bringing up the rear, called out to him:

You'd better not go too near, he said.

States said nothing. Firmly determined to capture the animal, he strode bravely up until within a few feet of it, when he stopped suddenly and quickly.

My God, it's a tiger, cried States, turning white as a sheet and executing the most rapid retrograde movement probably that ever fell to the lot of man. The others did not wait till he reached them. Every individual man took to his heels and cleared the field with unparalleled promptness. They ran back to the butcher shop, where States got an axe and an old bird gun. Several of the others scared up an old shot gun apiece, and in a body they ran to the Red Lion Hotel for more assistance. Here the only man they found awake was Allen Eckert, the barkeeper. Eckert, like States and the others, at first would not believe what they told him. To satisfy them, he joined the party, however, and for the third time the place was visited, this time with more caution and circumspection than on any of the previous occasions. Eckert took the lead, vowing that if there was any wild animal there he would find out what it was. By this time it was lighter, for the morning had begun to break. Eckert got to the fence but went no farther. Stopping short as his precedents had done before him, he uttered an exclamation and retired the way he had come, the rest of the party rapidly leading the way.

It is a tiger, sure enough, said Eckert, as he went back to the hotel and got an immense double barreled gun used for duck-shooting and heavily loaded with No. 5 shot. Armed with this effective weapon, and accompanied again by the others with their small bird guns which not one of them would dare to fire, they got down by the fence again. By this time it was about six o'clock. When they reached the place the animal had risen from the spot where he was first discovered and was walking slowly along on the other side of the fence.

It was a tiger, and a very large one. He moved along the fence slowly until he came to a point opposite the place where the men were standing. Here he stopped a moment, and, placing his paws against a rail, looked over. The men promptly proceeded to give him more latitude, retreating to the nearest house, which was occupied by a family named Clary. Eckert requested Mrs Clary to leave the door open, so that in the event of his shot missing its object he could retreat inside The animal, meantime, had taken himself off the fence and was leisurely pursuing his way. Going down within about 30 feet of him Eckert let fly with his gun at him Just as he was about to fire he was stopped by a yell from one of the party, who advised him not to risk it, as, if he missed and only served to rouse his ire, some of them would lose their lives Without heeding, the request he went a little closer, and while the animal stopped to look at him, took deliberate aim for the region of the left shoulder and fired The tiger jumped five or six feet into the air and fell dead without a groan The men ran to the dead tiger with loaded gun promptly cocked and cautiously approached the dead beast in order to administer additional gun into the dead tiger's head being evidently determined that he should not come back to life again after having done this and still having doubts as to whether the work was complete, Mr States came forward with his axe and battered the animal's head almost into a jelly, after which there appeared to be but little doubt that he was dead The next thing to be done was to remove the body. A lumber wagon coming along at that time, the carcass was placed upon it and hauled up to the Red Lion stable, where it was weighed and measured Its weight was 205 pounds, it was seven feet nine inches long and over three feet high. It measured 13½ inches around the fore arm. The animal escaped from Forepaugh's menagerie, which had been in Frankfort for the past two days. It could not have been at large long, as Hoffmeyer was the first man, by all accounts, to discover it. The distance from Frankfort to Torresdale, is about six miles. It had probably been in the woods all night until driven by hunger into the fields. The news of the killing spread like wildfire in Torresdale yesterday, and hundreds of people, including many of the summer residents of the town and surrounding country, visited the place to inspect the carcass. If the hide is not claimed by Forepaugh it is the intention of the Red Lion folks to have it stuffed. Had the discovery been made later in the day, the excitement would have been tenfold more intense. Occurring as it did at an early hour, when few were out of their houses, the excitement did not begin until after the animal had been killed and the news had spread through the neighborhood.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

For Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Eruptions and Eruptive diseases of the skin, Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Blotches, Tumors, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head. Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa, arising from internal ulceration, and Uterine disease, Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, General Debility, and for Purifying the Blood.

This Sarsaparilla is a combination of vegetable alteratives—Stillingia, Mandrake, Yellow Dock—with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and is the most efficacious medicine yet known for the diseases it is intended to cure.

Its ingredients are so skillfully combined, that the full alterative effect of each is assured, and while it is so mild as to be harmless even to children, it is still so effectual as to purge out from the system those impurities and corruptions which develop into loathsome disease.

The reputation it enjoys is derived from its cures, and the confidence which prominent physicians all over the country repose in it, prove these expressions of its usefulness.

Certificates attesting its virtues have accumulated, and are constantly being received, and as many of these cases are publicly known, they furnish convincing evidence of the superiority of this Sarsaparilla over every other alterative medicine. So generally is its superiority to any other medicine known, that we need do no more than to assure the public that the best qualities it has ever possessed are strictly maintained.

SELECT POETRY.

Good Night, Good-Bye.

Say but good night, Good-bye,
A word that seems the world would die!
Say not good-bye! say but good night,
And say it with the tender, light,
Caressing voice, that links the bliss
Of yet another day with this,
Say but good night!

Say not good-bye! Say but good night;
A word that blesses in its flight,
In leaving hope of many a kind.
Sweet day like this we leave behind.
Say but good-night! Oh, never say
A word that taketh thee away!
Say but good night!
Good night!

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Truest Charity.

Miss Lacy's elegant carriage was standing at the curbstone in front of a door on which a silver plate announced the name of "Lyman North, M. D.," and Miss Lacy's liveried coachman sat solemn and stylish on the box, having about all he could do to manage the restless, magnificent pair of bays.

Miss Lacy's footman stood in silent, respectful waiting, at the open door of the carriage—altogether making an aristocratic, imposing spectacle, at which Dr. North's handsome blue eyes wandered occasionally, as, in his office from his seat by the window, he was talking to Miss Lacy.

Not that the young lady was not worth all his attention—all the attention any man could pay her, aside from her position in society, and her almost unlimited wealth; for a sweeter face was never lifted in girlish enthusiasm than her's, as her big gray eyes, glowing darkly, her voice thrilling and earnest, she was telling Dr. North and his friend, another aspiring M. D., a tale of suffering and sorrow and want, she had come across on one of her charity visits; and, in her sweet, gracious way, asking for their subscriptions on her list to ameliorate the sickness, the sorrow, and the want.

Doctor North listened, and looked from her lovely face, elegant toilet to the establishment outside, and smiled in concurrence with her views.

Certainly, I will be delighted to do my little share, Miss Lacy. Put me down for fifty dollars on your list. I wish I could make it more. Jasper, here, will supplement it, of course.

Nellie smiled delightedly, showing the distracting dimple in one peachy cheek, and her beautiful white teeth, so pearly and even.

Oh, Dr. North, what a generous donation! Why, I had no idea you would subscribe so largely. No one has been so liberal yet that I have asked.

Doctor North bowed in response to her impulsive little thanks.

Don't speak of it; really it is not worth mentioning. It is a double pleasure you have afforded me, Miss Lacy, that of being some actual, practical benefit to your charity cases, as well as—I hope—pleasing you.

He gave her an ardent little look, that brought a swift little flush in Nellie's cheeks, and a certain delightful quickening of her heart-throbs, that more than once similarly happened in connection with Dr. North's handsome blue eyes, and fascinating smile and melodious voice.

You are very, very good, she answered, lifting her sweet eyes for just one second—long enough to create fresh havoc and new elations in Doctor North's heart, and he glanced from the pure, glorious, girlish face to the elegant equipage outside, with a very self-satisfied expression on his face.

Nellie turned to Dr. Jasper, grave, refined, standing beside the mantle, watching the little play going on, a stern, curious look in his thoughtful, fine eyes.

He did not give her an opportunity to ask him.

Miss Lacy, I regret very much that I am not able to afford adding a subscription to your list. If it were possible—if I could conscientiously do it—believe me, I would not refuse you; but it is impossible.

His voice was quiet, self-possessed and markably sweet and manly, and he looked squarely in her eyes as he made his grave, courteous regrets.

Just the merest, faintest suggestion of displeasure and coldness crept over her face as she listened, then inclined her head in her gracious, set, haughty way.

I am sure you know best, Doctor Jasper. Pray pardon me for having annoyed you!

She stuffed the fresh, crisp fifty dollar greenback in her little portmannaie, bowed her adieu, just tinged with a little feminine pique to Doctor Jasper, into whose eyes a half amused little smile crept as he gravely returned it—then to Doctor North, with a charming grace and a bewitching smile:

I shall never, never forget what a grand kind heart you have, Doctor North,—And do be sure, please, to be at my house next Thursday evening.

He assisted her in her satin-cushioned carriage, and ventured to press slightly her pearl-kidded hand at parting, while Nellie, her face slightly flushed, turned impulsively to the quiet looking, elderly lady, in black silk, on the front seat.

Isn't he just too splendid for anything, aunt Annie?

Mrs. Lawrence smiled oddly.

If you think so, dear. Tastes differ, however.

Nellie flashed an indignant little look at the calm, cold-spectacled eyes.

Oh, auntie! he gave me fifty dollars for the O'Bannigan family!

And he'd better have kept it, to my thinking. And where next, Nellie?

While in D. Lyman North's aristocratic office, with its velvet carpets on reception and private rooms, its plush furniture, and paintings on the frescoed walls, its rich draperies at the windows, that gentleman was sitting complacently in his official chair, his hands in his pockets, his handsomely-booted feet stretched out, and he returned Jasper's sarcastic look.

Well, you look as though you didn't approve, Phil.

I don't, he returned, shortly. The idea of you giving away the sum of fifty dollars just because the fair beggar happens to be Miss Lacy, the richest. You can no more afford it than I can, North.

[illegible]

You look [illegible] in that you were still in debt for all like, [illegible] give to her just as soon as you get home. Keep her warm and as quiet as possible. I guess it will be all right; I will do all I can, anyhow.

He stepped back into the light of his office window and watched Fan escorted and Nellie watching the wonderful where the cold, haughty look was she had seen so plainly before.

Then he went on, and Fannie escorted her young mistress home, to be well-freighted with needful necessaries and a few needful luxuries, and a month's wages in advance, before she went to her own little third-floor rear room.

Nellie went down stairs into the dusky parlors, and thought over the odd little adventure of the evening; and the result was that, when Doctor Phil North attended her Thursday evening, he was quite astonished to account for Miss Lacy's cold courtesy, instead of the charming graciousness he had expected, and most ardently desired.

And as he never received a second invitation he became satisfied that something had happened—something he never knew, until a year or so after, when Nellie Lacy was Doctor Jasper's wife; and then, by some mysterious means, he learned how it all had happened. And he knew he was deserving of his received deserts.

WONDERFUL SURGERY.

THE MANNER IN WHICH A TEXAS GIRL IS KEPT ALIVE.

The San Antonio correspondent of the Galveston News tells the following story of a wonderful surgical operation recently performed in the former City. San Antonio contains a wonder, the like of which cannot be found in the United States. It is nothing more or less than a child, seven years old, that, instead of masticating and swallowing its food in the usual manner, is fed through an aperture in the stomach made for that purpose. The child is gaining strength, can walk and play, and bids fair to soon be as stout and healthy as any other child. On Saturday last I determined to go and see the child for myself. The facts are as follows: About two years ago Mr. S. T. Lumley, at that time living in Pennsylvania, had the misfortune to have this little daughter Jessie drink a solution of lye, which a negro woman had carelessly left on the table. A large quantity of the corrosive liquid was swallowed. Death is the certain result in such cases. There have been quite a number of cases in San Antonio, where children drank concentrated lye, and none have survived except in this instance. The lye destroyed the mucous membrane, and a stricture of the œsophagus is formed, which means that the throat, or at least the channel through which the food goes into the stomach, is drawn together or contracted to such a degree that only liquids, and not much of them, can pass through. If the child does not die at once, it lingers for a year or so and then goes into a consumptive condition and perishes of a slow starvation. It is impossible for a human being to live exclusively on liquid nourishment; but where concentrated lye has been taken there are times, particularly in cold, damp weather, when the sufferer can not even swallow milk. All attempts to open the closed up œsophagus are futile, hence the sufferer slowly starves to death.

Such was the condition of the little little girl, Jessie Lumley, when she was taken to San Antonio for treatment. The child was very much emaciated, could not swallow even liquid food for days at a time. As it was the only positive chance she had for life, her parents consented that the operation of making an opening in the stomach should be attempted. The operation has been performed in England but this is believed to be the first time it has been attempted in the United States. Your correspondent cannot give the technical terms, but can make the modus operandi intelligible to the general reader. An incision four inches long was made a few inches to the left of the pit of the stomach, much stitching being required. Through this incision the stomach is reached. The next part of the operation requires the most delicate handling imaginable. It consists of sewing the stomach to the walls of the abdomen, but the greatest care has to be taken not to penetrate the stomach itself. The needle and stitches only penetrate the skin of the stomach. The result is that the stomach, as the wound gradually heals, grows to the wall of the abdomen.

The patient was put under the influence of chloroform, and the operation successfully performed. Unfortunately the child had an attack of chills and fever, which had to be cured, which gave it a set back. The operation described took place three week ago. The stomach had grown to the sides of the abdomen, and eight days ago the final operation of making a small incision into the stomach, through which the food was to pass, was performed, and twice a day during the past week a beefsteak, cut up fine, has been passed with the forceps into the stomach, and the child is steadily gaining strength.

On Saturday last I visited the child, and saw it fed. We halted in front of a small one-story house, which we entered. A little girl with light hair and blue eyes, was sitting up in bed surrounded with playthings. Her mother, a young woman of about 30 years of age, was busy in the room.

Do you want your supper, Jessie? said the doctor.

I want steak. I don't want any bread, cos it hurts, said the little girl, whose thin features and pale complexion showed the result of her long fast.

The mother brought in the rare beefsteak which the doctor proceed to cut into small pieces, crumbling up the bread at the same time. The food being prepared, the child lay back on the bed, and the opening of the side was exposed. It was only an inch in length, and presented the appearance of a badly healed cut. It was a little inflamed. I stood by and saw the doctor take one piece after another, and carefully introduce it with forceps into the stomach, until the plate was nearly empty. The child complained a little at times, but did not appear to suffer any. Finally she said my stomach is full, and as there was no more steak, the doctor desisted. Finally some cotton was placed in the opening, a bandage put on, and she sat up and was soon fondling her playthings. To the inquiry if this mode of taking nourishment would have to be kept up through life, no definite answer was given, as it depends on the possibility of widening the stricture of the throat.

—If we may believe the Adventists to-morrow is to occur the dissolution of the world. Our democratic friends imagined they heard premonitions of that event on the 4th inst.

—The Smethport Lumber Company is booming. Orders are crowding in upon them faster than they can fill them, even with their new steam power. Their latest order is for the lumber the new Court House.

—The business boom still continues. The railroads find their supply of cars too small to carry all the freight that offers, and the majority of the companies are having new cars built as rapidly as possible.

—The Philadelphia North American says the Democrat and Herald, of Somerset, which fight each other so bitterly, are printed under the same roof and upon the same press, and their editors can swap tobacco without going out of doors.

—Smethport society is getting gay early in the season. An elegant affair took place at the residence of D. A. Easterbrook on Tuesday evening. The culture and refinement of the town was immensely represented and the dance continued till day began to dawn.

—From and after next Monday morning the guests of the Bennett House order their daily bread from neatly printed bills of fare. There is no trouble about the fare, and it will be the aim of the MINER job rooms to make the printed bills proportionately tasteful and attractive.

—E. V. Chadwick is advertised as the proprietor of the Academy of Music at Bradford. Since the re-opening of this house under his proprietorship the ladies of the stock company are said to tread the boards in tights to crowded houses. Ev. tuny yet make his fortune out of the legitimate drama.

Among the eminent clerical gentlemen expected to be present are Bishop Kerfoot of this diocese, Bishop Coxe, of the Erie diocese, Dean Miller, of Erie, Dean Getz, of Warren and many others.

—The first carload of Ohio stone for the new Court House has arrived at the depot. Mr. Dunne Patterson has the contract of hauling them from the depot to the site of the building. As soon as the work of hauling them commences look out for oil country roads between here and the depot.

—To the Bradford Evening Star: The Commissioners did not "try to reserve the right to use the old Court House until after the close of the February term, 1880"; the court will not "be held at the appointed time in the Baptist church"; and the county officials will not "probably rent rooms in the Bennett House."

—The local editor of the Elmira Advertiser has had a falling out with his best girl and meanly exposes her as follows: "We know a girl who will wrestle with a croquet mallet in the hot sun for hours and not complain. But just ask her to hold on to the wooden end of a broom for a few minutes and she'll have a fit."

—Eugene Mullin, Esq. of Bradford has formed a law partnership with J. M. McClure, Esq., late of Allentown, whose advent in the county we noticed in a recent issue. Eugene is an assiduous worker and we are pleased to learn that he is gradually and surely working his way to the front rank of his profession.

—The Prothonotary and his clerks are becoming very much wanted to the inside of a church and begin to rather like it. At first it all seemed strange to them, and they hardly knew how to act. But that is not to be wondered at. We have no doubt some of us will feel lonesome and a little homesick for a few days after we get to heaven.

—The contest before the Governor for a gas company charter in Duke Center has been decided in favor of the Carter & Kemper Company. Much of the credit of the decision belongs to N. M. Orr, Esq., of this borough. The Governor had about decided to refuse a charter to either of the contending parties when the Carter party sent for Mr. Orr, by whose arguments and influence the scale was turned in favor of his clients. It is a notable triumph for a young attorney and our friend Orr is justly complimented over his success.

—Observe several local items on inside, crowded over from last week's issue, to-wit: School report and a "Strong" letter.

—The sons of great men are at a discount at the present time. Young Adams, son of Charles Francis Adams, was nearly skunked for Governor of Massachusetts. Ben Butler's son was defeated for representative, and Fitzhugh Lee failed of an election to the Virginia house of delegates. And yet it is said that "blood will tell."

—George King still holds the track and serves the customers of his milk route with the promptness of a slight draft and the regularity of a calendar clock. There are three things that can always be depended upon to be on time, viz: death, the tax collector, and George's covered milk wagon. He has made a success of his route simply by his promptness and strict attention to business, and so long as he continues to so faithfully meet the wants of his patrons he has little cause to fear injurious competition.

—A number of the members and friends of the M. E. Church comprising a welcome surprise party waited upon the Rev. W. B. Wagoner, at the parsonage, on Friday evening last, evidently prepared to have a good time, those not bringing provisions handing in their donations. After having passed a most enjoyable evening the party separated about ten o'clock. Had the nature of the visit been more generally understood there would undoubtedly have been a much larger attendance of members to show the esteem in which Mr. Wagoner is held as their pastor and the pleasure all feel that he is to be with them another year.

—We understand that some of our Warren friends are expressing great doubts as to the ability of Mr. Hogan to build the Court House for $75,000 except at a loss. They would be convinced, however, if they could watch his foreman of the work, Mr. Conrader, for half a day. He is not only one of the best carpenters and mechanics in the State, but seems to have the faculty of getting more work out of the men under him than any man living. And it is all done without confusion, ill temper or high words, and the men all like and respect him. If the completion of the job at the time specified depends upon Conrader he will have it done and a few days to spare, and don't you forget it.

—The Olean Times is in a state of mind over the fact that while the little provincial village of Olean polled 893 votes at the last election the bustling "city" of Bradford only polled 544, and argues therefrom that Olean is a bigger town than old Bradford. Why, bless your soul, neighbor, not more than one half the voters of Bradford or McKean county took the trouble to vote at all this fall. The Republicans knew that Butler was certain of election by anywhere from 35,000 to 100,000 majority in any event, and the democrats were too dispirited to make an effort. Not more than one half the vote of the county was polled. Wait till we have it as hot in Pennsylvania as it was in New York this fall, and then come on with your figures and comparisons.

Election Expenses.

The exercise of the right of suffrage in the selection of our rulers in a strictly pecuniary point of view is an expensive luxury. The expenses of the recent election in McKean county, paid out of the county treasury, amount to the very respectable sum of about $1225. Of this sum $600 was paid to assessors for registering voters, and the balance was absorbed in payment of election officers, advertising, rent of election houses, blanks, &c.

Wreck on the B. N. Y. & P. R. R.

Tuesday afternoon freight train No. 12 on the B. N. Y. & P. railway ran off the track at Franklinville. The locomotive was ditched, capsized and completely disabled, and six way-freight cars were completely demolished. The cars were loaded with merchandise. Trackmen had been removing and replacing rails, and one was put down temporarily to permit the freight train to pass. It gave way, however, under the great weight of the locomotive, and resulted as stated. Afternoon trains on the road were delayed one hour and a half.

He Has Resumed.

By reference to a card in our new advertisements it will be seen that Mr. Thomas King has resumed the practice of his profession, and opened an office for that purpose over W. T. Callar's drug store. It is well known that he has few equals in his profession, and those having need of the services of a practical engineer or surveyor will be pleased to learn that his services can be secured. He will also give particular attention to office work in the way of mapping and conveyancing, which no man can do better than he. The mere statement that he is ready to attend to professional demands will secure him all the work he wants to attend to.

Changes on the B. N. Y. & P. R. R.

An important change on the B. N. Y. & P. Railroad, came into effect this morning. Train No. 1, which has hitherto started from Port Allegany left Olean instead, at 8 a. m. and will continue to make this the starting place until further notice. The corresponding train No. 4, from leaving Buffalo at 4:10 p. m. will arrive at Olean at 7:00 and go no further up the river.

Passengers from Port Allegany desiring to reach train 1 at Olean will have to come on here by the wild cat train which arrives at 7:30 a. m. In the afternoon up the river passengers will take "Al." Love's train leaving Olean at 4:15 p. m. Train No. 3, leaves Olean for Buffalo at 4:05 p. m., instead of 4:00 as heretofore. —Olean Times of Monday.

A $105,000 TRANSACTION.

Sale of the Moody Tract of 7,000 Acres.

The details of the largest sale of oil lands ever made in the Bradford field are made public for the first time today. On the first of October, George C. Howe, C. C. Melvin, A. B. Walker, F. G. Babcock and D. D. Babcock, well known oil men, and John Allen, Jr., President of the Western Transportation Co. and a director of the New York Central R. R., John Williams, George E. Laverick and others of Buffalo, purchased the Moody tract of 7,000 acres of Horace J. Moody, the heirs of Webb Clark, Scribner and others of New York city, for $105,000, or at the rate of $15 per acre. The tract is situated south of Bradford and lies between the East Branch and the headwaters of Kendall Creek and Cole Creek. The lands purchased are divided up as follows: Melvin, Walker & Howe take 2,500 acres, the Babcock Brothers, of Hornellsville, get 1,000 acres and John Allen, Jr., and the other gentleman of Buffalo secure the half or 3,500 acres. On the 16th of October, the day on which the boat race did not take place, the purchasers with George Berry, Esq., their attorney, sauntered off to Buffalo and closed the transaction. The tract is deeded to John Allen, Jr., and George C. Howe. Mr. Howe negotiated with the New York parties for the lands. As soon as the owners agree upon a division of the lands they will be thrown on the market. Last Winter Engineer Towl surveyed the tract and divided it up into 100 acre lots. This immense tract was leased years ago by the P. C. L. & P. Co., who have drilled five wells on it at different times, one of which is now producing oil.—Era.

—Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., in offering to dairymen their Perfected Butter Color, free from all flavor or deleterious compounds, have accomplished for farmers, what in the aggregate must put millions in their pockets. It is as harmless as the color of an orange and costs but little.

The World's Choice Magazine.

John Greenleaf Whittier, the most [illegible] as four among the [illegible] Andover review of [illegible] magazine is the [illegible] periodical in the world." Prof. Peabody, the astronomer, wrote from Boston: "What a wonderful magazine it is for young folks, and ours are quite as much delighted with it as American can be!" That it is calculated to delight the little folks everywhere is indicated by the fact that it is to be issued in French by Delagrave of Paris and that even the far-away Little Moslems are now to have a volume made up of translations from ST. NICHOLAS into Arabic by the Rev. H. H. Jessup.

Beginning with the November number (ready Oct. 25th) the magazine is to be printed on heavier paper with wider margins, and is to be so much enlarged that the new volume will contain nearly two hundred more pages than any former volume, while the price will remain the same. The publishers announce many brilliant novelties, including a new serial by Miss Louisa M. Alcott, entitled "Jack and Jill;" "The Treasure-Box of English Literature," in which will be given gems from Standard English and American authors; an Acting-Play for Sunday Schools, by Rev. Edward Eggleston, which will be printed in time for the holidays, with full directions for its representation in school exhibitions; and a beautiful Fairy Operetta for children entitled "The Sleeping Beauty in the Wood."

The November number has two beautiful frontis-pieces and a red-line title page, and contains over sixty illustrations. In it, begins a new serial story for boys, "Among the Lakes," by the author of "Dab Kinzer."

Another splendid serial for boys has been secured for this volume,—"The Fairport Nine," a story of a baseball club, by Noah Brooks. In short, ST. NICHOLAS, which has no rival on either continent, is to be better than ever.

A superb Christmas number is in preparation, to appear early in December. Subscriptions should begin with November. Buy it of your book-seller, or send the subscription price to the publishers. Price $3.00 a year; 25 cents a number.

SCRIBNER & Co., 743 Broadway, N. Y.

An "Agricultural Number" of Scribner's Monthly.

In addition to the usual variety in the contents of SCRIBNER, the November issue contains a half dozen papers of the highest interest to farmers, and others interested in rural life: "The Agricultural Distress in Great Britian," by P. T. Quinn; "Farming in Kansas," by Henry King; "Success with Small Fruits," by E. P. Roe; "Rare Lawn Trees," by Samuel Parsons, Jr.; "The Mississippi Jetties," and their effect on the prices of agricultural products, and "How Animals Get Home," by Ernest Ingersoll.

There are two fine portraits of Bayard Taylor—one engraved by Cole, from the best photograph, and the other a reproduction by Joengling, of O'Donovan's bronze bass-relief. These portraits accompany a discriminating critique of Taylor, by Stedman. Clarence Cook has a paper on "Morris Moore's Old Master," with a reproduction, by Cole, of Raphael's "Apollo and Marsyas." There are Poems, Stories and Sketches; "The French Quarter of New York"; "Extracts from the Journal of Henry J. Raymond," with interesting reminiscences of Daniel Webster; a beautiful story, by Boyesen; an ingenious story, "A Sigh"; the fourth part of "Confidence," by Henry James, Jr. begun in August; and the first part of a new American novel of Creole life, "The Grandissimes," by George W. Cable, of New Orleans, the author of "Old Creole Days," which has created such an excellent impression in the literary world. "The reign of Peter the Great," by Eugene Schuyler, is noted editorially. This splendid series of Illustrated Historical Papers, the greatest work of the sort yet undertaken by any popular magazine, will begin in January issue, and will continue for two years.

All that enterprise and skill can do will be done to maintain the position of SCRIBNER as the leading popular periodical of America. With the revival of the agricultural and business interests of the country, increased attention will be paid to papers on great public enterprises and interests, already a notable feature of the magazine.

Price $4.00 a year; 25 cents a number. Subscription should begin with the November number. Buy it of your bookseller or send the subscription price to the publishers,

Harper's Magazine for December, 1879.

Harper's Magazine for December is a very beautiful and interesting Number. It opens with an entertaining article entitled "The Fortunes of the Bonaparts"—the writer of which prefers to remain anonymous—illustrated with sixteen fine portraits of the most prominent members of the Bonapart family.

"Sea Drift from a New England Port," by Lizzie W. Champney, illustrated by Howard Pyle, contains some very novel and curious information respecting New London society a hundred years ago.

Miss J. L. Cloud continues her picturesque description of Irish scenery and character in the Connemara Hills, accompanied by some quaint pencil sketches. Ernest Ingersol contributes a paper on Atlanta, Georgia, with some excellent pictures.

"The Palestine of To-Day," by Dr. J. F. Hurst, is illustrated with engravings from the Harper's new edition of Dr. Thomson's "The Land and the Book."

Miss F. E. Fryatt describes the "New York Cooking School," Miss Curtis contributing six beautiful illustrations.

"Blossoms" is the title of an exquisite little poem by Philip C. Sullivan, illustrated by Miss M. R. Oakey. The ballad of Whittington—a fac-simile of the British Museum MS.—is given, with five illustrations by Abbey.

Longfellow contributes a poem of curious interest, the subject of which is an iron pen (presented to the poet by a lady in Maine) made from a fetter of Bonnivard, the prisoner of Chillon—the handle of wood from the frigate Constitution, and bound with a circlet of gold, inset with three precious stones from Siberia, Ceylon and Maine.

James T. Fields contributes a reminiscent paper, entitled "A New and True Ghost Story."

In fiction, besides the three great serial novels by Black, Blackmore, and Miss Braddon, there is a very strong short story by Rose Terry Cooke.

Without reference to the contents of the Editor's Drawer, the publishers of new books, or the interests of the Lowest, or many other departments of this Chronicle of Progress, the most varied as well as the most beautiful Number of the year.

ROLL OF HONOR.

On the other hand, for every misdemeanor, neglect of duty, or violation of self respect, one is deducted, and for five such failures the the name is dropped from this roll, for the week.
